ABSTRACT

Approximately 600 resources related to women are listed in this bibliographical guide. The guide actually contains 19 individual bibliographies on various topics; some are annotated and some are not. Almost all entries were published during the 1960s and 1970s. The 19 categories are: research bibliographies; women's studies resources; American Psychological Association documents related to women's issues; journals, newsletters, and periodicals; women and media resources; the women's movement; psychology of women; battered women; marriage, motherhood, divorce, and widowhood; sex roles, sexism, and non-sexism; non-sexist resource materials; non-sexist films and filmstrips; women and work; careers; mid-life crises in women; lesbianism; health resources; religion; and miscellaneous resources for women. Baldrige, Letitia. Juggling: The art of balancing marriage, motherhood and a career. The Viking Press, 1976.

An easily read success story of a woman who has the best of three worlds.

Chapman, J. R., & Gates, M. Women into wives: The legal and economic impact of marriage. Beverly Hills: Sage Publications, 1977.

Seventeen writes from various disciplines; address themselves to marriage as a reinforcer of women's dependent state.

Cardolo, A. R. Women at home. New York: Doubleday & Co., Inc., 1976.

The author tells the story of liberated women making the choice to stay at home and raise a family. She also points out how creative women keep their professional skills from getting rusty by doing part-time work at home or through community efforts. The author also sees the need for career women to feel free to pursue the success ethic without social pressure to marry and have children.

Charny, I. Marital love & hate. New York: The Macmillan Co., 1972.

This book written for popular appeal discussed the need for a revised marriage contract in which one can love and hate; honor and dishonor; obey and disobey. It also deals with the idealized myth of "Marriage Beautiful".

Clinebell, Charlotte Holt. Meet me in the middle: On becoming human together. New York: Harper & Row, 1973.

The author sensitively discusses the difficulties of marriage in a changing society. She believes "liberation, in its most basic and fulfilling sense, means freedom for both halves, female and male."

Felmley, Jenrose (Ed.). Working women: Home makers and volunteers. (Available from Business and Professional Women's Foundation, 2012 Massachusetts Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.)

This is a small annotated bibliography of work done by women as homemakers, in their homes and as volunteers in a larger community.

Fleming, J. B., & Washburne, C. K. For better, for worse: A feminist handbook on marriage and other options. New York: Scribner, 1977.

The main theme of this book is that love in marriage can only take place by two independent people working to re-define the traditional crippling roles of husband and wife. Other relationship options for women are explored. It also has a comprehensive bibliography.

Fogerty, M. P. Sex career and family.

An empirical study which investigates ways in which women can break down discrimination barriers, develop occupational competence, and work out new family relations to accommodate dual careers.

Gurman, A. S., & Rice, O. G. Couples in conflict. New York: Jason Aronson, 1975.

A voluminous book for professionals which offers new directions in marital therapy. It contains chapters which deal with feminist views on marriage and sex-role issues.

Hoffman, L. W., & Nye, F. I. Working mothers: An evaluative review of the consequences for wife, husband and child. San Francisco: Jossey-Bass Pub., 1974.

This book pulls together research findings on the effects of maternal employment on the family. A timely book for professionals in the helping professions and the sophisticated reader. This book has excellent references.

Holmstrom, L. L. The dual-career family. Cambridge: Schenkman Publishing Co., 1973.

The author explores how married couples strike a balance between their professional ambitions and family relationships. Research data was provided through interviews with husbands and wives with serious career commitments.

Lopata, H. Z. Occupation housewife. New York: Oxford University Press, 1971.

This book is based on research on almost a thousand women in metropolitan Chicago and challenges popular stereotypes about non-creative and non-participant housewives.

McGinley, Phyllis. Sixpence in her shoe. New York: The Macmillan Co., 1960.

A dated but still refreshing witty book about the joys of being a housewife and mother--food recipes too.

Neil, N. & G. Open marriage: A new style for couples. New York: M. Evans & Co., Inc., 1972.

A much publicized and misinterpreted book which questions complete togetherness in marriage.

O'Brien, Patricia. The woman alone. New York: Quadrangle/The New York Times Book Co., 1973.

The author, a reporter for the Chicago Sun-Times interviewed women of all ages who were single, widowed, or divorced. Integrates her own experience of retuning to her career after eight years of being a full time housewife and mother. The basic theme of her book is that becoming psychologically self-reliant often becomes a difficult, but necessary, lonely process.

Whitfield, E. A., & Gustav, A. (Eds.). Counseling girls and women over the life span. Washington, D.C.: National Vocational Guidance Association Monograph, 1972.

This book provides an overview of human development and focuses on the career counseling needs of girls and women. One chapter looks to women in the year 2000.

DIVORCE

American Journal of Orthopsychiatry, 1977, 47 (1).

This issue contains three excellent articles on divorce counseling and interventions with children in divorcing families.

Brandy, Susan. Between marriage and divorce. New York: William Morrow & Company, Inc., 1975.

A very personal diary describing the painful end of a marriage. The author, an editor and writer for Ms. Magazine.

Carter, H., & Glick, P.C. Marriage and divorce: A social and economic study. Cambridge, Ma.: Harvard University Press, 1970.

Fisher, E. O. Divorce: The new freedom. New York: Harper & Row, 1974.

The author, a pioneer in the field of divorce counseling, offers this guide to divorcing and divorce counseling. It is suitable for both professional and lay readers.

Gardner, R. A. Psychotherapy with children of divorce. New York: Jason Aronson, Inc., 1976.

This is a voluminous book written for professionals. It has a unique chapter on the therapist and divorce litigation -- there are few psychiatric books which advise the therapist on how to conduct custody evaluations and deal with alimony and other legal problems.

Gardner, R. A. The boys and girls book about divorce. New York: Jason Aronson Inc., 1970.

Illustrated and contains an introduction for parents. There are helpful chapters on getting along with step-parents and preparing children for individual therapy. The reading level is suitable for the pre-adolescent.

Grollman, Earl A. (Ed.). Explaining divorce to children. Boston: Beacon Press, 1969.

A collection of articles which includes views of the minister, priest, and rabbi.

wife. It is written for popular appeal but offers no real solutions for the woman alone. This newer book notes the influence of the women's movement.

Krantzler, M. Creative divorce. New York: The New American Library, Inc., 1975.

This book offers a new opportunity for personal growth after dealing with loneliness, guilt, anger, and rejection.

McKennedy, Mary. Divorce: A selected annotated bibliography. Metuchen, N.J.: The Scarecrow Press, Inc., 1975.

This bibliography is an excellent source for information on the legal and financial aspects of divorce. It also discusses American divorce laws by state and divorce outside of the United States.

Survival manual: A feminist handbook on separation and divorce. Philadelphia: Women In Transition, Inc., 1972.

This book offers very comprehensive resources but with personal value-laden comments.

Yates, M. Coping: A survival manual for women alone. Englewood Cliffs, New Jersey, 1976.

The author shares her own moving and painful experience of widowhood and then provides valuable, well-researched information for single, widowed, or divorced women. Her book aims to help single women to deal with crucial dollars-and-cents practical issues and cope with the emotional challenges of life as a single person.

For pamphlet on "Am I Parent Material," send to National Organization for Non-Parents, 806 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208.

ORGANIZATION OF WOMEN FOR LEGAL AWARENESS was founded to help make women aware of their legal rights, primarily in divorce, and the implementation of these rights. For further information contact Organization of Women for Legal Awareness, 94 Claremont Avenue, Maplewood, N. J. 07040 (201) 762-5208.

MOTHERHOOD: MOTHERS/DAUGHTERS

Friday, N. My mother/my self: The daughter's search for identity. New York: Delcorte Press, 1977.

The dedication in this book describes the dynamic theme of this book--"When I stopped seeing my mother with the eyes of a child, I saw the woman who helped me give birth to myself."

Hammer, S. Daughters and mothers/mothers and daughters. New York: Quadrangle/The New York Times Book Co., 1976.

This powerful book explores mother/daughter relationships which cross social, racial, or generational barriers--relationships which allow for separation and growth or foster dependency and thwart self realization.

Lazarre, Jane. The mother knot. New York: Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 1976.

The author shares her own experiences and explores the myth of the "Good Mother".

Motherhood: Mothers/Daughters - Continued

Rich, A. Of woman born: Motherhood as experience and institution. New York: W. W. Norton Co., 1976.

A powerful book which combines the author's personal insights with history, research, and literature and looks to a "world woman will truly create new life, bringing forth not only children (if and as we choose) but the visions, the thinking, necessary to sustain, console, and alter human existence--a new relationship to the universe."

Sebald, H. Momism: The silent disease of America. Chicago: Nelson Hall, 1976.

A provocative book dedicated to Betty Friedan and Philip Wylie (who created the term "Momism" in A Generation of Vipers). The author, a sociologist, claims the objectivity of a scientist, but the material can be inflammatory to the lay reader.

Spinner, Stephanie. Mother love: Stories by women about motherhood. New York: Vell Publishing Co., 1978.

Seventeen writers examine the woman as a mother --how she sees herself, her relationships with her children, and the world at large.

Williamson, N. E. Sons or daughters: A cross-cultural survey of parental preferences. Beverly Hills: Sage Publications, 1976.

This book offers data to show a daughter preference in a very small minority of cultures.

WIDOWHOOD

Caine, L. Widow. New York: William Morrow & Company, Inc., 1974.

The personal crisis of a widow in America--what a widow should not do.

Glick, I. O., Parkes, M., & Weiss, R. F. The first year of bereavement. New York: John Wiley & Sons, 1974.

Challenges many preconceptions about bereavement, using case studies of widows and widowers. Discusses the nature of healthy mourning, risks of mental illness after bereavement, changing roles and different intra-social responses to widows.

Widowhood - Continued

Kreis, B. & Pattie, A. Up from grief: patterns of recovery. New York: Seabury Press, Inc., 1969.

Written by two widows. Interview of 500 persons, showing normal stages of grief and how it can be successfully overcome.

Lynch, J. J. The broken heart. New York: Psychiatry and Social Science Book Center, 1977.

The author cites that the incidence of heart disease is significantly higher among the loneliness prone--the widowed, divorced, and separated.

Morris, S. Grief and how to live with it. New York: Grosset & Dunlap, Inc., 1975.

A professor of psychology observed her own grief, and tries to extend from that experience some insight into handling feelings of bereavement and ways to evaluate the well-meaning, poor advice given by untrained friends.

Silverman, P. (Ed.) Helping each other in widowhood. New York: Health Sciences Publishing Corp., 1974.

This book shows how widows served as volunteers to help others help themselves. It discusses in detail the results of the two year self-help widow-to-widow program at Harvard which used new mental crisis intervention, the new therapeutic approach to mental health, to help grieving widows.

Strugnell, C. Adjustment to widowhood and some related problems. New York: Health Sciences Publishing Corp., 1974.

This is a selected and annotated bibliography with references related to bereavement, special problems of widowhood, and formal and informal helping relationships.

ANNOTATED BIBLIOGRAPHY OF NON-SEXIST PICTURE BOOKS FOR CHILDREN

- Brenner, B. Bodies. New York: E. P. Dutton, 1973. All kinds of bodies doing all kinds of things. It shows boys and girls in the nude, and on the page showing bodily functions, it has a photo of a small boy on the toilet. A real breakthrough book!
- Brownstone, C. All kinds of mothers. New York: McKay, 1969. An interracial book showing mothers who work both outside and inside the home. The common thread is their love for their children.

Burton, V. L. Katy and the big snow. Boston: Houghton Mifflin, 1943. Katy is a tractor who is strong enough to plow out an entire snowed-in city.

Cohen, M. Will I have a friend? New York: MacMillan, 1967. A little boy on his first day at a child care center (taken there by his father) asks if he will find a friend at school. He begins the day feeling uncertain, but by the time he leaves, he's found many friends and feels more secure. He shows that boys have feelings of uncertainty and that a father can take part in his child's life.

Eichler, M. Martin's father. Chapell Hill: Lollipop Power, 1971. This very simple story is about a nurturing father. It shows Martin and his father performing all the housekeeping tasks essential to daily life as well as enjoying play situations together. Although it never specifically states that no mother is present in the family, it can be used as a story with which one-parent children can identify. The fact that the nurturing parent in this case is the father makes this book a fine addition to a non-sexist book-list.

Felt, S. Rose-too-little. New York: Doubleday, 1950. A story of competence and achievement with a little girl as the main character. Rosa wants a library card and has to learn to write her name to get one. She perseveres all summer in the city, and since Rosa is Hispanic, it has the added attraction of being a success story about a minority child.

Goldreich, G., & Goldreich, E. What can she be? New York: Lothrop, Lee & Shepard, 1972. Photographs show a female veterinarian taking care of animals in her hospital. Two other "What Can She Be?" books portray the work of a broadcaster and a lawyer.

Leaf, M., illustrated by Robert L., The story of Ferdinand. New York: Viking, 1936. This classic story is about a non-stereotyped bull! He is gentle, quiet, peace loving, and fond of flowers. He does not like to fight, charge, or roar, but he is still a great big, strong bull. It is a fine non-sexist book because it subtly criticizes prescribed roles.

Merriam, E. Mommies at work. New York: Knopf, 1961. A good book about mothers who work outside the home. It has a positive tone and combines well the home-making and working qualities of women. It also depicts many interesting jobs held by women.

Maber, B. Ira sleeps over. Boston: Houghton Mifflin, 1972. Ira would like to take his teddy bear to his first sleepover but is afraid his friend will think him a baby. When Reggie takes his teddy bear out of a drawer, Ira goes home (next door) to get his too. Shows that boys also need the comfort of stuffed animals.

Zolotow, C. The summer night. New York: Harper & Row, 1974. A gentle story of a nurturing father and his little girl. When she can't go to sleep on a warm summer night, her dad figures out all sorts of ways they can enjoy themselves.

Zolotow, C. William's doll. New York: Harper & Row, 1972. This well-written book is outstanding for both the quality of its language and its message. It is about a boy who wants a doll to nurture, and about the reactions of his family and friends to his request. When the grandmother explains to William's father her reasons for buying William the doll he wants, she gives a moving account of the importance of the development of gentle and nurturing qualities in prospective fathers.
